About the Workshop

Every leader's mandate is to recognize, nurture and unleash their people's potential. Only through this can they amp up engagement, performance and ultimately, productivity. But what happens when their people actively withhold the most powerful parts of themselves due to fear, insecurity or the belief that their true selves won't be accepted in the workplace?

While leaders may dream of this organization firing on all human cylinders, the reality is the inability to nurture and accept 100% of people's unique contributions – their 'swagger' – (not to mention our own) means they in return choose to give only 60% of their commitment, courage and capabilities. This "swagger gap" comes at a serious cost and can be devastating to culture, effectiveness and the bottom line. Closing it is the secret to a super powered, super performing and super happier workplace.

In this experiential workshop, WSJ & USA Today bestselling author Leslie Ehm, brings her high-energy, infectious, soulful style to help leaders model and manifest their own swagger and nurture it in their people. Through exercises, discussion, and engaging real world examples, Leslie helps leaders recognize what holds their people back from bringing their authentic selves to work, how to develop the kind of insight and trust that creates connection, and create an environment and workforce brimming with confidence, positivity, and power.

For any organization who wants to be the kind of a sought-after workplace where top talent not just gravitates to but stays and flourishes, Swagger for Leaders is the workshop that will take your leaders to the next level in people management and performance.
